In the last two months, there were 71 citations added to the database. Nearly half of these (34 citations) were associated with our recent work surrounding population health, funded in part by a grant from the Kresge Foundation. As with many emerging topics, there is a combination of work defining the topic, consensus reports and peer-reviewed publications. This mix is represented in the citation additions. The grant project has resulted in a new tool to guide the design and evaluation of outpatient environments to support population health.
